INTRODUCTION

“The living know that they must die, but all the dead neglected lie.” So says an inscription on a gravestone at the Acushnet Cemetery, one of the early cemeteries in the original township of Dartmouth. The saying also describes the state of a number of burial sites in the present town of Dartmouth. Through neglect, or loss of information about their existence, many of the burial grounds within the town had been forgotten. As was often the case, neighbors and abutters knew of the locations of burial grounds, but no comprehensive list of locations of burial grounds within the town existed.

This publication developed out of a project of the town’s Historical Commission to locate all existing burial grounds within the town’s boundaries. The commission undertook this task in order to record these burial grounds on the Massachusetts State Inventory of Historic Places. That inventory provides an historical record of the community resources, and makes information about these resources available to the public, and preserves the information for future generations. While this researcher was visiting the cemeteries and recording their locations and physical attributes, it seemed appropriate to copy the information on existing gravestones, in order to preserve for future generations that information as well. Therefore, this publication includes information on all burial places located, as well as a listing of persons buried within the town.

On the boundaries of the town of Dartmouth are located two large cemeteries run by the Catholic church, St. John’s Cemetery and St. Mary’s Cemetery. A small portion of each of these cemeteries lies within the boundaries of the town of Dartmouth. Because they are considered New Bedford cemeteries, and because it would be difficult to determine exactly which burials lie physically within the town limits, I have chosen not to include the burials in these cemeteries in this project. The burials in both St. John’s and St. Mary’s are inventoried; copies of those inventories are available at the cemetery offices and at the New Bedford Free Public Library.

Persons looking to locate early burials in Dartmouth should keep in mind that Old Dartmouth—the original town of Dartmouth incorporated in 1664— included, as well as the present town of Dartmouth, the towns of Acushnet, Fairhaven, and Westport, and the city of New Bedford. Early “Dartmouth” burials may be physically located in any of the places in the Old Dartmouth area.

Early in the project, it was decided not to include precontact native American burial sites in the project. Those who know of these burials do not wish to publicize their locations, for fear of desecration of the sites by treasure hunters. I respect their wishes, and their purpose. That is a subject beyond the scope of this publication.

Cemeteries were located by a variety of means; including consultation of old maps of the Town, of lists located in the Town Clerk’s Office and prepared for the Dartmouth Veterans’ Agent, and of Vital Records of Dartmouth, Massachusetts to the year 1850: Volume III: Deaths published in 1930 by the New England Historic Genealogical Society. Many, many townspeople responded to inquiries about the locations of long-abandoned cemeteries, and to them I am grateful. Hunters, children playing in the woods, and hikers have visited out-of-the-way places in the town that would not be found by those who travel the paved streets.

Thanks are due to the many people who called me to tell me about cemeteries in their neighborhoods and on their property; to Chairman Kathleen Fair and member Jane Bernert of the Historical Commission, who helped with the inventory of the South Dartmouth Cemetery, the town's largest; to Ken Ruffley, Wilfred Francis, Paul Levasseur and Jim Murphy, who took time out to guide me to cemeteries I never would have found; to Jerry Calnan and Clifford Wareing, who helped me understand South Dartmouth Cemetery; to Howland King, who began the inventories of several Friends Cemeteries; to the ninth-grade class at Friends Academy, who, with their teacher Kathleen Fair, inventoried the cemetery at Hixville as part of their history studies; to Nat Harris, who researched the assessor's numbers for the cemeteries; and of course to my husband, Edward G. Lund, who drove to improbable places with me, climbed over fences, and scraped mud off fallen stones to help me read inscriptions. Thanks are also due to Jay Howland, who stepped in when the project was completed, to edit this manuscript and make it ready for the printer.

Rather than introducing a new set of numbers for organizing the cemeteries, this book is keyed to the Massachusetts State Inventory form numbers, which begin with 800. These key numbers merely reflect the order in which the cemeteries were located and the forms were filed with the Massachusetts Historical Commission, a project that was begun in 1975 by the Dartmouth Historical Commission.

Once each cemetery was located, it merely remained to copy the information from the gravestones extant. Information as it appears on the lists in this publication was copied directly from the stones. Information contained in parentheses was my addition—where a family name was omitted from the stone but was known, or where I could calculate the birth date from the death date using the age. This calculation may cause the year of birth to be incorrect, as when the age is not given more closely than in years. The same applies to my designation of “probably” in reference to family relationships. For example, when a man and woman share a gravestone or plot and a name, as well as likely dates, I have indicated they were probably man and wife. Similarly, children may appear by plot location and dates to be related to persons of a previous generation.

Some other information about burials has been included that was not on stones in the cemeteries, and the sources are noted with code letters a through j as follows:

- a) Information concerning burials published in Vital Records of Dartmouth, Massachusetts to the year 1850: Volume III: Deaths, which was collected in 1930 when that record was published. Those gravestones either have become too worn to read or have disappeared in the intervening years.
- b) Information found in the vital records section of the minutes of the meetings of the Dartmouth Monthly Meeting of Friends. These records of deaths occasionally note the location of a burial. Because the Rules of Discipline forbade marked graves until 1851, there is little physical evidence of early Quaker burials.
- c) Unpublished manuscripts by local historian Henry B. Worth. These manuscripts contain a wealth of material about the early property and history of the Old Dartmouth area. Included are lists of burials, which I have included. Uncharacteristically (because Worth was a careful researcher), most of the names he records as being buried at cemetery 804, Newtown, turn up, when located, at 801, Joseph Davis, leading me to wonder about the accuracy of Worth's remaining entries for those cemeteries. At least, if they are in error, it is only a matter of being on the wrong side of the street!

- d) List of veterans buried in Dartmouth, which is maintained by the Veterans' Agent, as prepared by Scott Lamontagne in 1989 and Kristin Schofield in 1993.
- e) Additional information gained from the cemetery records held by the person who currently manages burials. These records reflect burials for which stones have disappeared or, more likely, were never placed after the burial.
- f) Additional information gained from the Town Cemetery records held in the Town Clerk's Office at Town Hall. These records reflect burials for which stones have disappeared or, more likely, were never placed after the burial.
- g) Additional information from records of the South Dartmouth Cemetery. The caretaker keeps a copy of these records in the maintenance shed at the cemetery.
- h) Information gained from a family member, who reported some grave-stones were "removed for safekeeping."
- i) Information from a descendant.
- j) Information found in The Quaker Meeting House at Apponegansett by George Tiffany Berish.
- misc) A collection of miscellaneous burials located and not located, with explanations; see page 511 at the end of Part IV.

Other symbols used in the burial listings:

- ? The date was too worn to read clearly; some guesswork involved.
- This information was missing or worn beyond guesswork.
- () Parentheses around dates indicate my extrapolations from information about the age of the person included in the inscription. The date may be off by one year when the age at death does not include months and days. Occasional names and alternative spellings are also enclosed in parentheses, when the actual information was missing but when physical evidence (for example, close location within a family grouping) suggested the family name.

Family relationships:

- h) husband;
- w) wife;
- s) son;
- d) daughter, etc.
- prob) "Probably" is used when persons share a headstone or plot and information suggests a relationship, but the relationship is not spelled out in the inscription.

TO USE THIS BOOK

To find the grave of a particular person, locate the name of the person in the alphabetical master list of burials, which begins on page 9. That list gives the name, death and birth dates (if known), and sometimes information about family relationships. It also gives the key number of the cemetery, an 800 number. The cemeteries are presented in numerical sequence, beginning with 800, starting on page 161. For each cemetery is given the street address, a brief description, and a list of the persons buried there. An index of cemeteries by name begins on page 1. A list by location follows, beginning on page 5.

If you are unable to locate the person you are seeking, try an alternative spelling of the name; for example, for Reed try Read; for Eldridge, Eldredge; for Chase, Chace. Different family members sometimes spell their names differently, and these problems are compounded by the stone carvers and the record keepers for the cemeteries.

Dates also have been confused in the same way. In many instances, the dates on the stones and the dates in the cemetery records are quite different. In some cases, the cause of this discrepancy seems to be that the date of burial was recorded in one place, the date of death in another. Actual death dates are best checked in the death records filed with the clerk in the town where the death occurred.

Having determined the location of a particular burial ground, please note whether the property is public or private. Many of the burial grounds in Dartmouth are on private property and are not accessible without prior permission of the property owners.

Please remember also that burial places in Massachusetts are protected by law, which is backed up by substantial fines. It is illegal to alter or remove burial stones or stone walls from cemeteries or otherwise to disrupt graves or gravesites in any way.

Hixville Christian Church Burial Ground

Public

Location: North Hixville Road, 1182

Number of stones: 90

Earliest death date: 1767

Latest death date: 1898

Acreage: 29,094 square feet

This burial ground contains some of the earliest marked burials in the town. Now surrounded by a cut stone wall, the burial ground predates the formal organization of the Hixville Meeting house, across the street, with which it is generally associated. Unlike most burial grounds within the town, this cemetery contains several slate gravestones. Unfortunately however, the slate stones bear only inscriptions and are devoid of the rich ornamentation prevalent on stones found in the Boston area.

Joseph Davis Burial Ground

Public

Location: Faunce Corner Road, north of 110

Number of stones: 202

Earliest death date: 1792

Latest death date: 1988

Acreage: 25,000 square feet; 0.57 acre

This well-preserved burial ground is about to be enclosed by commercial development. It bears the name of Joseph Davis, who maintained a blacksmith shop under a large tree, at the front of the cemetery, when the roadway was located farther from the cemetery wall. Oral tradition says that he buried his daughter here behind the shop, though there exists no tangible evidence to corroborate the story. There is evidence, the grave of Mary Crowell, which indicates that the area had been in use as a burial ground from the time of Joseph Davis' birth. Dartmouth historian Henry B. Worth says this cemetery once served as the town cemetery.

Pine Grove (Island) Cemetery

Public

Location: Pine Island Road, east of 161

Number of stones: 210

Earliest death date: 1825

Latest death date: 1993

Acreage: 37,758 square feet

Located by the side of the road in the far north part of town, this small cemetery, originally privately owned and run but now the property of the Town, has served generations as a neighborhood burial ground. A manuscript map now in the collection of the Old Dartmouth Historical Society, setting forth plots and their owners, is a copy of an original by Davis Collins, suggesting that he might have originally sold plots and managed this cemetery.

Apponegansett Meetinghouse Burial Ground

Private

Location: Russells Mills Road, 856
 Number of stones: 337 + fieldstones
 Earliest death date: 1823
 Latest death date: 1974
 Acreage: Several acres

On July 16, 1706, Dartmouth Monthly Meeting (of Friends) agreed "their should be [beside the meetinghouse] a peace of land six roods square fenced in with a stone wall for a burying ground." A Committee of Friends was "to see that friends bury in order, and that none be buried there but friends, and such as friends allow of." Since the Rules of Discipline forbade extravagances of interment and did not allow grave markers until after 1852, the early graves are unidentifiable. Dartmouth Monthly Meeting Minutes record deaths of members, and occasionally indicate their place of burial. Records of such early burials as are known here come from this source.

Newtown Burial Ground

Private

Location: Old Faunce Corner Road, opposite
Ann & Hope

Number of stones: 124 + fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1778

Latest death date: 1923

Acreeage: 33,775 square feet

All that remains to commemorate the congregation that met here in silent worship is the burial ground. In 1754 Josiah Merrihew sold to certain men for the Dartmouth Monthly Meeting a lot of land 11 by 16 rods, upon which a meetinghouse was built with a burial ground beside. By 1808, all of the original group were dead but John Russell, and Russell conveyed the property to Dartmouth Monthly Meeting. Within 20 years the meetinghouse was taken down, probably at the time of the construction of the meetinghouse at Smith Mills on the Tucker Road. This peaceful spot remains, now with a view of suburban commercial sprawl replacing the riverbank. The cemetery continues to be maintained by Dartmouth Monthly Meeting.

The gravestones here are simple, typical of Quaker taste; but the dates attest to the fact that not all Friends followed rigidly the Rules of Discipline concerning presence and size of grave markers.

Smith Neck Friends Burial Ground

Private

Location: Smith Neck Road, 594

Number of stones: 97

Earliest death date: 1843

Latest death date: Present

Acreage: Perhaps 5,000 square feet

In 1822, Caleb Anthony deeded to Dartmouth Monthly Meeting the land "whereon is the Meeting House." No doubt the burial area was established at the time of the building of the house for worship; but because Quaker practice discouraged marked graves, the extent of burials here may never be known. The present meetinghouse and the burial ground continue in active use.

South Dartmouth/ Padanaram Cemetery

Private

Location: Elm Street, between Bush Street and Memorial Drive

Number of stones: 5,252

Earliest death date: 1764

Latest death date: Present

Acreage: 14.10 acres

Physically the largest burial ground in the town of Dartmouth, this cemetery is thought by many to be the town's property. In fact, it has always been a private cemetery, early known as the Sherman Burial Ground. The cemetery is run by a board of trustees. Buried here are many of the prominent citizens of the town, the first minister of the Congregational Church, and 105 sea captains, reflecting the long involvement of the town with the sea.

Friends Burial Ground

Private

Location: Chase Road at Old Westport Road

Number of stones: 364 + fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1851

Latest death date: Present

Acreeage: 1.43 acres plus 23,236 square feet

In 1845, the Wilburite branch of the Society of Friends separated from the New England Yearly Meeting of Friends. It was therefore necessary to build a meetinghouse for the Wilburite group, led in Dartmouth by the Tucker Family. In 1850, Benjamin Tucker purchased of Perry Gifford land on the south side of the main Road (now a state road, Route 6) for the meetinghouse, which still stands at that location. Shortly thereafter, the Wilburite group purchased land on Chase Road from Benjamin Tucker for a burial ground.

In 1852, Yearly Meeting decreed that simple stones might be placed over Quaker burials. Since this cemetery was established at about that time, it is assumed, and borne out by what records exist, that there is not a large number of unmarked gravesites in this burial ground, as there is in other Quaker burial grounds in Dartmouth.

Akin Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Anthony Street and Akin Street

Number of stones: 1 + fieldstones

Earliest death date: Unknown

Latest death date: Unknown

Acreage: 34,965 square feet; 0.80 acre

A leader in Dartmouth's early history, John Akin made his first recorded appearance in Dartmouth when he purchased land in 1692. (Family tradition says the Akins arrived from Scotland about 1675, when John was 12.) In 1712 he purchased the Allen Farm, which comprised the portion of Padanaram between Prospect and School Streets; Akin then sold off the portion east of what is now Rockland Street. Akin's house may have been on what is now School Street, where an old cellar hole was recorded in a deed of 1818. Akin's sons continued prominent in Padanaram history, involved in shipbuilding, farming, and running a public house. An Akin house built in 1762 remains on Dartmouth Street at Rockland Street; and another, built in 1760, is located at 359 Elm Street.

Exactly who is buried here may never be known. Only one complete slate and about a dozen upturned fieldstones remain to mark graves in this burial ground. Neighbors refer to this as the "Indian Graveyard," but that may be merely legend, as it seems unlikely the Akins would have buried their family members among native burials.

Allens Neck Friends Cemetery

Private
Location:	Horseneck Road, 739
Number of stones:	484 + fieldstones
Earliest death date:	1826
Latest death date:	Present
Acreage:	Total property 1.57 acres

In 1758 in Dartmouth there was a revival of religious spirit among Friends. Those in the southwest part of the town determined to establish a meeting closer to their homes than Apponegansett. They chose a site overlooking Buzzards Bay, and by 1761 they had completed their first small meetinghouse. As Friends were in the practice of burying their dead in the churchyard, one can assume that burials began here at the time of the first meetinghouse. These sites would have been unmarked, as the Quaker Rules of Discipline forbade gravestones until 1852. This supposition is supported by references to early burials here in the Minutes of the Dartmouth Monthly Meeting.

The modest unadorned stones of this burial ground are generally arranged in rows, facing west. Whether this arrangement is for theological reasons or because of the physical orientation of the property is unknown. In keeping with the Rules of Discipline, early burials are in chronological order, with a separate section maintained for children. Later burials are by family group. Early stones bear names and dates only, except in one section, where there are numerous small stones bearing only initials, perhaps a moral compromise with the rules prohibiting the "vain and empty custom of erecting monuments."

Ashley Family Cemetery

Private
 Location: High Hill Road, behind 710
 Number of stones: 17 + fieldstones
 Earliest death date: 1815
 Latest death date: 1916
 Acreage: 10,680 square feet

This small cemetery is the final resting place of members of the Ashley family, who at one time owned properties on both sides of High Hill Road bordering Freetown. The nearby house at number 710, now in separate ownership from the cemetery property, was once the home of Civil War veteran Jarvis T. Ashley, who returned home after the war to farm the property.

Brightman Family Cemetery

Public

Location: Division Road, opposite 445

Number of stones: 8

Earliest death date: 1840

Latest death date: 1908

Acreage: 1,435 square feet

In the second half of the nineteenth century, Brightman-owned homes were found on both sides of Division Road in this vicinity. The home of Abner Brightman, now gone, was situated on the same side of the road as the cemetery. The Brightman family were probably farmers; but they also appear to have had a seafaring tradition, albeit ill-fated, as three members of the family were lost at sea.

Chace Family Cemetery

Public

Location: Old Fall River Road, opposite 879

Number of stones: 28

Earliest death date: 1846

Latest death date: 1939

Acreage: About 0.15 acre; undeveloped property behind

This small walled family burying ground is contiguous with cemeteries

#813 and #840 along Old Fall River Road. Predominantly the final resting place of members of the Chace (Chase) family, this cemetery has stones aligned facing the street (north) and arranged in small family groupings.

Less seems to be written about the modest inhabitants of the north of town than is written about the shipbuilders, captains, and merchants of South Dartmouth. One can surmise from the general agricultural bent of this area, and from the scattering of homes indicated on the maps, that farming was the chief means of livelihood for these citizens.

One wonders whether it was religious, social, or simply economic reasons that caused these people to eschew the established burial ground at Hixville (#800), less than half a mile away, in favor of this location.

Acreage: About 0.15 acre

This cemetery differs from #812 above only in that the stones are all aligned facing west, the traditional orientation for early cemeteries in New England. Oriented thus, the deceased would awake on the day of judgment to face the rising sun.

John Collins Cemetery

Public

Location: North Hixville Road, north of Rod and Gun Club of New Bedford

Number of stones: 14 + pieces

Earliest death date: 1834

Latest death date: 1955

Acreage: 4,901 square feet

Several Collins families lived in the far northern part of Dartmouth; this burial ground is one of at least three Collins family cemeteries located in this part of North Dartmouth. The various Collinses who lived here were successful millers and farmers, making their living from the land. The size of the stones, the style and length of the inscriptions, and the erection of the stones before 1850, suggest that the persons here were not Quakers but may have been congregants of the village church in nearby Hixville.

Thomas Collins Cemetery

Private

Location: North Hixville Road, on property of Rod and Gun Club of New Bedford

Number of stones: 6

Earliest death date: 1836

Latest death date: 1851

Acreage: Approximately 2,000 square feet

This burial round is the final resting place of the family who owned the property and worked the mill located below the millpond, a saw- and grist-mill originally built in 1760. As with #814 above, these stones are not in the style and shape typical of the Quakers who populated the center and south of Dartmouth, suggesting this family may also have been congregants of the village church at Hixville.

Location: Mishaum Point Road, behind 172

Number of stones: 2 + 2 fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1839

Latest death date: 1845

Acreage: Approximately 900 square feet

John Cornell lived nearby and probably farmed the area near the cemetery where he and his wife are buried. His home still survives, remarkably unspoiled, a summer residence for its owner, who still keeps the farm in operation. It is recorded that after 1816 John Cornell rebuilt and operated a saltworks on Mishaum Point, one of about a dozen that operated during the summer months along the shore of the present town of Dartmouth.

Crapo Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Bakerville Road, north of 31
 Number of stones: 3 (also pets)
 Earliest death date: 1831
 Latest death date: 1915
 Acreage: Approximately 100 square feet

Peter Crapo, a resident of the northern boundary of the then town of Dartmouth, purchased in 1798 the farm property, which included the area used for burials. Perhaps he sent his son Jesse to work this property. In 1803 Jesse married Phebe Howland of South Dartmouth. The next year he built their home on the farm property, a house that still stands at 267 Rock o'Dundee Road. Jesse Crapo was described by his descendant, Henry Howland Crapo, as "a kindly lovable man of gentle nature" but also one in whom "restless ambition lay dormant." He was not considered poor, but his unremitting labor on the farm "brought forth a mere subsistence."

Phebe Howland and her family were Quakers. Jesse is described by his descendant as a "Crapo, . . . a godless man." His burial was marked by a simple carved slate without ornamentation, which still leans against a tree. When Jesse's widow died, nearly 40 years later, it appears his original stone was replaced with one to match hers, and those stones are of the style commonly seen on Quaker burials in this area.

Evergreen Cemetery

Public

Location: Old Fall River Road, opposite 600

Number of stones: 180

Earliest death date: 1846

Latest death date: Present

Acreage: 8.38 acres

This burial ground was originally the Russell Family Burial Ground, part of the family's holdings along Old Fall River Road. Stones indicate that it also served from its beginning as a neighborhood burial ground. In 1935 the Russell heirs deeded the cemetery to the town of Dartmouth, including all unsold lots, suggesting that the family had sold plots to the neighbors. Town Meeting minutes indicate that the walls, gate, and roadway were town improvements made after 1940, as is the recently installed well. Since 1935 this burial ground has served as the town cemetery.

Faunce-Snell-Ashley Cemetery

Private

Location: Faunce Corner Road, south of 636

Number of stones: 21

Earliest death date: 1838

Latest death date: 1916

Acreage: Approximately 600 square feet

This small burial ground, separated from farm fields by a neat stone wall, contains a pleasing variety of simple stones. There appears to be little information about the people buried here; but they were probably farmers, as many residents of this area still are. Henry Worth, Dartmouth's early historian, notes only that "here lay John L. Snell and Stephen Ashley, connected by marriage to that Ancient Family of Plymouth [probably meaning Faunce] that come to this region in 1770."

Earl Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Faunce Corner Road, north of 110

Number of stones: 2 + fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1718

Latest death date: 1728

Acreage: Approximately 750 square feet

The Earl burial ground stands on private property on part of what was the original Ralph Earl farmstead, 350 acres located at the head of the Aponegansett Bay. Earl was an important figure in the area's early history, a captain in the militia who persuaded the hostile local Indians to surrender to the forces at Plymouth. This event proved pivotal, because the Indians were sold into slavery from Plymouth, provoking those who remained free to carry out severe reprisals on the settlers at Dartmouth.

The stones are unusual for South Dartmouth, in that they are early, slate, and decorated. The preponderance of early settlers in South Dartmouth were Quakers, a people who eschewed ornamentation and whose Rules of Discipline forbade gravestones until 1852. The ornamentation on the stone of Joseph Earl, by an unidentified carver, is virtually identical to that on stones found at the (now-called) Acushnet Cemetery, the location of the early Dartmouth settlement at the head of the Acushnet River.

Nathaniel Howland Cemetery

Private

Location: Salt Creek Road, between 3 and 5

Number of stones: 15

Earliest death date: 1804

Latest death date: 1881

Acreage: Approximately 3,000 square feet

The location of this cemetery is part of the farm, largely salt marsh, laid out to Nathaniel Howland before 1700. In 1826 another Nathaniel Howland, heir of the original Nathaniel, formed a company with several partners and family members to build a bush saltworks on his property, one of about a dozen saltworks along the Dartmouth shore. The first salt was made two years later, and the manufacture continued from May until late fall into the first decade of the twentieth century. The saltworks was an imposing structure, much taller than the more common vat type; it was 680 feet long in 1903, but originally twice that length.

Susan Lamb Cemetery

Private

Location: Old Westport Road, between 405
and 411

Number of stones: 1 + fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1804

Latest death date: 1881

Acreage: 0.16 acre

Census records suggest that the Lamb family were farmers, residents of a house that was located nearby, as shown on the 1856 map. They then may be considered typical town residents, for at this time about 50 percent of the employed persons were farmers.

Almy-Briggs-Sanford Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Crocker Street, beside 10

Number of stones: About 10

Earliest death date: 1833

Latest death date: 1869

Acreage: Approximately 300 square feet;
boundary unclear

This burial area is undefined; it is now the side yard of a house built nearby; and burial stones continue into the dense underbrush, which has not been cleared in many years. A portion of stone wall, which may have enclosed the burial area, remains on one side, with indications of a gate opening still evident. The stones that have been located are simple marble slabs bearing basic biographical information.

This small burial ground appears to be the final resting place of families that lived nearby. One can speculate from the physical evidence that they were modest folk, perhaps farming the land between Russells Mills Road and the Apponegansett Bay.

Methodist Church Cemetery

Public

Location: Russells Mills Road, behind 272

Number of stones: 37

Earliest death date: 1832

Latest death date: 1931

Acreage: 21,780 square feet

This cemetery is all that remains today of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which served this part of town in the middle years of the nineteenth century. The land for the church was originally purchased by the trustees of the church in 1838; additional abutting land was purchased in 1842. In locating the burial ground for the church here also, the trustees were apparently following an established pattern, as one burial, that of a Gifford neighbor, predates the organization of the church.

Because the Methodists set no strict constraints upon burials, this cemetery displays a variety of styles and materials of monuments; one substantial ornate monument to Captain Robert Gerry and his wife Rhoda stands out above the others. This burial ground also includes a stone of an identified maker, which is rare in Dartmouth. The stone, signed by J. Dexter, a stone carver from the neighboring town of Fairhaven, marks the graves of two Gifford children, Amy and Joseph, who both died in August 1845.

Mosher Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Division Road, beside 26

Number of stones: 9

Earliest death date: 1854

Latest death date: 1957

Acreage: Approximately 2,500 square feet

This small family burial plot served the Mosher family, probably farmers, who lived in several houses along Division Road. Although principally active in the mid-nineteenth century, this family's final resting place served into the middle of the twentieth century, as descendants of the original family were returned to this spot. The cemetery is easy to overlook because it is in a slight depression and very badly overgrown.

Private

Location: High Hill Road, behind 346

Number of stones: 11 fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1822

Latest death date: 1900

Acreage: Approximately 4,000 square feet

In the rear yard of the farmhouse that once belonged to Ashleys and Rotches is their well-preserved family burial ground. The variety of grave-stone shapes and the modest ornamentation suggest a reasonably successful family not constrained by the Quaker religion. These families were principally farmers, typical of Dartmouth's residents. Family tradition, perpetuated by the Dartmouth veterans' agent, suggests that Civil War veteran Mac McQuestion, who married into the family, is buried here, although no stone marks his grave.

Buried here are various members of Gidley families, who appear to have lived in the neighborhood. Long forgotten, the simple stones are cracked and broken, lying about on the ground; and the area is overgrown, showing evidence of at least ten years of abandonment.

This small burial ground is the resting place of members of the family that lived in the stone house at the end of the drive. One could guess that son-in-law Joseph Lewis, for whom the obelisk is erected as a cenotaph, went to San Francisco to seek his fortune in the gold fields, although this theory is so far unsubstantiated by examination of the few crew lists that exist for vessels that left this area bearing gold-seekers.

Private

Location: Fisher Road, behind 1143

Number of stones: 66

Earliest death date: 1844

Latest death date: 1989

Acreage: 29,055 square feet

This cemetery was originally associated with the Second Christian Society in Russells Mills Village. The meetinghouse lot, located on Russells

Mills Road opposite the end of Fisher Road, was purchased in 1837, and the meetinghouse built shortly thereafter. Four years later, eight church members purchased the property on Fisher Road for a cemetery. They sold off the front lots, the lot to the west for a schoolhouse (now the Grange Hall) and the easterly lot for a residence. A right-of-way to the cemetery is preserved in the deed to the residence lot at 1143 Fisher Road along the southeast boundary of the property.

The church has long since ceased its religious affiliation, having served as a puppet theater, a children's museum, and a doll museum, and now as a private residence. The cemetery continues to be used occasionally by descendants of the original plot owners and by residents of Russells Mills Village.

Sabins Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Hixville Road, behind 801
 Number of stones: 16 + fieldstones
 Earliest death date: 1830
 Latest death date: 1914
 Acreage: Approximately 800 square feet

Long gone is the Sabins family home that was located nearby in this rural farming area. This burial ground holds the remains of two Civil War veterans, which are marked with government-issue markers.

Sherman Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Bakerville Road, rear of 55

Number of stones: 11

Earliest death date: 1763

Latest death date: 1867

Acreage: Approximately 3,375 square feet

This small walled family cemetery sits at the edge of development behind the houses that front Bakerville Road. The majority of stones in this cemetery mark the graves of Sherman family members, no doubt residents of the Sherman homes appearing here on the 1856 map of Dartmouth. The Sherman, Weeks, and DeHart families of Bakerville had close family ties through marriage. Like the others in Bakerville, they farmed the land and followed the sea, several being involved with the whaling industry.

Slocum Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Barney's Joy Road, opposite 114

Number of stones: 5 + fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1834

Latest death date: 1864

Acreage: Approximately 500 square feet

In 1665/6, Eliazur Slocum of Dartmouth purchased from John Smith of Dartmouth (see #834) 200 acres "at the place called Burnese Joy." Near the site of this burial ground was the home he built on that land, which would shelter several generations of Slocums. The house was built about 1700; after the death of Williams Slocum, it fell into disrepair, and it was finally dismantled in 1900. Early Slocums found the location agreeable for farming, for fishing - and it has been suggested, for other mercantile trade "on the wrong side of the law," that is, smuggling. These same shores are reputed to have served Dartmouth residents engaged in a similar trade during Prohibition.

Smith Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Little River Road, between 145
and 213

Number of stones: 11

Earliest death date: 1692

Latest death date: 1873

Acreage: Approximately 5,148 square feet

This Smith family cemetery is located in the woods far behind the site of the first Smith house on Little River Road. John Smith was an early comer to these shores, being recorded as an apprentice to John Doty in Plymouth about 1629. In 1648 he became a Quaker, married Deborah Howland, and soon followed her family to Dartmouth. In 1690 he built a home, originally a part of the house surviving at 145 Little River Road. Smith had a total of 13 children by two wives, and his many descendants populated this part of the town (see also #835 and #853).

In 1663 Smith was fined £2 for permitting Quaker meetings at his house. As he was obviously a practicing Quaker, it is surprising to find that he was the first to receive a military commission in the town of Dartmouth. Ten years later, he was appointed lieutenant of the military company of Dartmouth.

Smith Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Smith Neck Road at Salters Point

Number of stones: 5

Earliest death date: 1849

Latest death date: 1885

Acreage: 0.24 acre

Beside the road at the entrance to the private summer community of Salters Point, all Smith property originally, is located another Smith Family cemetery, where are buried the members of the Thomas Smith family. Thomas Smith is six generations removed from John (see #834). He owned properties on the west side of Smith Neck Road and just inside the present gate of Salters Point. In the 1840 census Thomas Smith is recorded as the head of a large household that includes a seaman, probably one of the young men of the household, and a farmer, probably the father, Thomas.

Private

Location: Faunce Corner Road,
well behind 856

Number of stones: 15

Earliest death date: 1840

Latest death date: 1883

Acreage: About 500 square feet

Far into the woods, close to an abandoned wood road, is found this neglected family cemetery, the resting place of at least four generations of the Rogers family. In the center of the burial area is a large, mid-twentieth-century monument, which bears the names and dates of four generations of the family. Included are the names of two brothers then alive, whose death dates have not been entered, although they are certainly no longer living. Perhaps one or both of them saw that this monument was erected, as they began to consider their final resting places. The Rogers family home appears on the 1856 map not far from this location. Isaac and John Rogers were farmers, as were many of the residents of this part of the town.

Elijah Macomber Cemetery

Private

Location: Fisher Road at Gidleytown Road

Number of stones: 4 fieldstones

Earliest death date: Unknown

Latest death date: Unknown

Acreage: Approximately 750 square feet

The identity of the burials here has been lost. Neighbors suggest the burial ground is associated with Elijah Macomber, a Revolutionary War veteran and a former resident of the area. The veterans' agent preserves the tradition that two unknown soldiers are buried here, and decorates the graves on Memorial Day.

Private
Location:	Bakerville Road, rear of 143
Number of stones:	19
Earliest death date:	1833
Latest death date:	1871
Acreage:	Perhaps 5,000 square feet

This cemetery is the final resting place of Joshua Weeks, his children, and his grandchildren. Physically, it is located between the homes of the father, Joshua, located at 117, and the son William, located at 167, both of which still remain. Joshua farmed the land.

Son William followed the sea, a tradition particularly strong in the Bakerville section of Dartmouth; he rose through the ranks to become master of several whaling ships, as did his brother Joshua, Jr.

(#812, #813, #840)

The third and largest of the three small family burial grounds lined up along Old Fall River Road, this burial ground, like the two small adjacent cemeteries (#812 and #813), is the final resting place of neighbors and inter-related families who lived nearby. Of interest here is an unusual group of stones dedicated to members of the Peckham family. This grouping of flat slates, engraved or scratched by an untrained hand, were inscribed to: Mother, 1850-1918; Father, 1841-1918; Brother, 1883-1891; Son, 1901-1906; Wife, 1887; Aunt, 1911; Uncle, 1912; and Brother, 1910.

Wilbur Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Tucker Road, north of 1157

Number of stones: 5

Earliest death date: 1825

Latest death date: 1874

Acreage: Approximately 5,000 square feet

This small graveyard is located not far from the location of the Wilbur family homestead. Within are several fieldstones. One marked stone bears the initials I.P.W., roughly carved. The stone marks the burial of Isaac P. Wilbur, and family tradition relates the story that Wilbur carved this stone himself several years before his demise.

The Wilburs were strong supporters of the Society of Friends in Dartmouth. Thomas Wilbur, who survived his brother Isaac, bequeathed this burial ground to the Dartmouth Monthly Meeting, which owns it today.

Barker Family Cemetery

Public

Location: Manchester Lane, north side
Number of stones: 0
Earliest death date: Unknown
Latest death date: Unknown
Acreage: 5,752 square feet

All that remains of this cemetery is a massive stone wall with an entrance gate and a wild tangle of catbrier. There appear to be no stones, formal or otherwise, to mark the graves that are thought to be located here. During his lifetime, Isaac Barker set aside and enclosed this lot with a wall for use as a family burying ground. In his will, dated January 26, 1854, he described this burial ground and reserved the right of passage "to and from the burying ground to all who may have occasion to bury there."

Gidley Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Fisher Road, behind 687
Number of stones: 5
Earliest death date: 1861
Latest death date: 1932
Acreage: About 2,000 square feet

Along an abandoned wood road, back from the developed residential area along Fisher and Gidley Town Roads, is the neatly walled Gidley Family Cemetery. The loosely-laid farmer-built wall which surrounds the cemetery is an extension of a wall which once separated the roadway from farmers' fields. Simple stones of a Quaker-type design mark the graves of several generations of the Gidley family.

Samuel Gidley's home, long gone, was located close by this cemetery. The federal census shows that Gidley was a farmer, probably working the lands which surrounded his home.

Unknown Family (Possibly Mosher) Cemetery

Private
 Location: Old Faunce Corner Road,
 beside Newtown
 Number of stones: About 6 fieldstones
 Earliest death date: Unknown
 Latest death date: Unknown
 Acreage: Approximately 450 square feet

Adjoining the northwest corner of the burial ground of the Newtown Meetinghouse (#804) is another small walled burial ground. It contains half a dozen upended fieldstones marking its burials. The property abutting that owned by the Newtown Quakers was owned for many years by the Mosher family. It is only speculation that the Mosher's buried their family members here.

Unknown (Probably Sambo Slocum) Cemetery

Private
 Location: Gaffney Road, beside 171
 Number of stones: 2 fieldstones
 Earliest death date: Unknown
 Latest death date: Unknown
 Acreage: About 500 square feet

Enclosed by a loosely-laid stone wall, this small burial ground contains two graves marked by fieldstones. Word-of-mouth tradition carried down to the current owners of this property says that this graveyard contains the remains of a couple who lived nearby, Sambo Slocum, a man of color, and his wife.

846

Vieira Farm Cemetery

Private
Location: Jordan Road at Barney's Joy Road
Number of stones: 8-10 fieldstones
Earliest death date: Unknown
Latest death date: Unknown
Acreage: Approximately 300 square feet

Separated off from the farmer's field at the corner of Barney's Joy Road and Jordan Road is a small cemetery, though no remains of this identification remain today. The last living Vieira daughter, whose father purchased that farm about 1896, recalls that at the time her father bought the property, there were already eight Indians buried there. She recalls that in 1918, when she was 12 years old, she attended the burial of two more Indians in the cemetery.

Susan Macomber Cemetery

Private
Location: Fisher Road, behind 589
Number of stones: 1 + 6-8 fieldstones
Earliest death date: 1848
Latest death date: 1848
Acreage: Limits unknown, perhaps 800 sq ft

Well into the woods behind the old farmhouse can be found one simple rectangular formal gravestone marking the grave of Susan Macomber, as well as several upturned fieldstones that appear to mark additional burials. The farmhouse was a Macomber family residence, so one can assume that the fieldstones mark the graves of other members of this family.

Location: Fisher Road, rear of 555
 Number of stones: 14, mostly fieldstones
 Earliest death date: 1846
 Latest death date: 1900
 Acreage: About 2,000 square feet

Fourteen burials are lined up in rows in the small cemetery next to a shed up the hill and behind the house on this property. The fieldstones bear hand-carved initials of the deceased. The current owner of the property reports that these stones mark the burials of members of the Reynolds and Teachman families. David W. Reynolds once owned the house that stood near the location of the present contemporary house.

Unknown Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Fisher Road at Old Westport Road

Number of stones: 15-20 fieldstones

Earliest death date: Unknown

Latest death date: Unknown

Acreage: About 0.5 acre

Now containing nothing but fieldstone markers, this cemetery once contained formal gravestones proclaiming its association with the well-known Cuffe family, residents of the part of Old Dartmouth that is now Westport. The original Cuffe homestead was located not far from here; this and the surrounding property remained in Cuffe family hands for several generations.

Unknown Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Old Fall River Road, rear of 910

Number of stones: 2 or 3 fieldstones

Earliest death date: Unknown

Latest death date: Unknown

Acreage: Approximately 400 square feet

About a quarter of a mile into the woods behind this old farmhouse is an anonymous family burial ground, probably once associated with this farm, or with the house once located at the end of an unpaved road nearby. All that remains in an area cleared some years ago for gravel is a clump of trees growing through the upended fieldstones, preserved during the stripping operations by persons who must have known the cemetery's history.

Whalon-King Cemetery

Public
 Location: Highland Avenue, north of 21
 Number of stones: 10
 Earliest death date: 1856
 Latest death date: 1897
 Acreage: Approximately 15,000 square feet

This substantial cemetery has become the object of vandalism; what stones remain are fallen and broken. The presence of many fragments suggests that once many more burials in this lot were marked. The remaining stones tell us that this was a community burial ground for the residents of the Westport Factory village area, the village which grew up around the 19th century cotton factory here.

Reed Family Cemetery

Public
 Location: Highland Avenue, north of 323
 Number of stones: 6
 Earliest death date: 1852
 Latest death date: 1886
 Acreage: 2,744 square feet

Four Reed family cemeteries (#852, #857, #858, and #859) and a major north-south road named for the Reeds attest to the presence of this family in North Dartmouth in the nineteenth century. By 1840, when the federal census began to include occupations, there were 19 Reed heads of household; all working family members recorded were employed in agricultural pursuits. Like most of the cemeteries in obvious locations along roadways in North Dartmouth, this one has suffered extensive vandalism; the stones are all on the ground, and most all are broken. The stones that survive are simple rectangles, modestly designed. Like most of the cemeteries in the North Dartmouth area, this one does not contain stones of the style associated with Quaker burials in the south part of town.

 Number of stones: 2 + 2 fieldstones
 Earliest death date: 1880
 Latest death date: 1901
 Acreage: Approximately 2,000 square feet

The Smith family were the principal owners and residents in this part of town in the mid-nineteenth century and before (see #834 and #835).

However, little information remains about Catherine and Christopher Smith, who are buried here. Two Smith family homes were located on this side of the road near the cemetery, suggesting that Christopher and Catherine either lived here or were related to the residents. Overgrowth outside this cemetery makes it easy to overlook from the roadway.

Almy Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Horseneck Road, 1194, Quansett
Farm

Number of stones: 3 + about 12 fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1774

Latest death date: 1979

Acreage: About 500 square feet

Buried here are Job and Lydia Almy, the first owners of Quansett Farm, their graves marked by slate stones. Job Almy's plot is marked at head and foot by ornamented slate stones, the headstone topped by a winged angel. His wife's burial was probably originally marked that way also; today, only her footstone remains. A later stone, that of William Almy, Jr., is a modern stone cut of slate to the same shape as that of his ancestor, though lacking the decorative ornamentation of the earlier stone.

Purchased by William Almy, father of Job, in 1707, this farm still remains under ownership of the Almy family. The family continues to farm the land, today raising horses on the property as well. This farm and the Tucker farm are the only properties in Dartmouth that remain in the families of the original owners.

Unknown Family Cemetery

Private
Location: Horseneck Road, well behind 133
Number of stones: 7 or 8 fieldstones
Earliest death date: Unknown
Latest death date: Unknown
Acreage: Approximately 250 square feet

At the intersection of two farmer-built stone walls that probably once marked the property bounds is a small grouping of upended fieldstones marking the burials of persons whose identity is long lost. The remains of a small stone foundation are located not far away---a residence? an outbuilding? Overgrown in the summer season, this burial area would be easily overlooked if its location had not been preserved by its owners. The property has recently been donated to Dartmouth Natural Resources Trust, assuring its preservation in its natural state.

Private
Location: Horseneck Road, beside 132r
Number of stones: 1 + 3 fieldstones
Earliest death date: 1819

Acreage: 200 square feet

Located beside a contemporary house at the end of a dirt lane, this small cemetery is ounded by a loosely built fieldstone wall. It holds one formal inscribed grave marker and three fieldstones. Local word of mouth suggests this burial ground is associated with the house at the beginning of the lane, number 132 Horseneck Road.

Private

Location: Melissa Lynn Drive at Deerfield Lane

Number of stones: 6 + fieldstones

Earliest death date: 1836

Latest death date: 1852

Acreage: 3,500 square feet

Until very recently, this Reed family cemetery was hidden away in the back field of a farm, probably once a Reed farm, not easily accessible. Because of its location, it has survived intact, its stones all still standing, though somewhat overgrown. Like #852, another Reed family cemetery, it has simple rectangular stones. This cemetery contains the remains of two Revolutionary War soldiers: Lemuel Reed, whose grave is marked by a formal stone, and Jacob Jones, whose grave is marked by a fieldstone.

Located well down the entrance road to what was probably a Reed family farm, this cemetery has survived because of its relatively inaccessible location. Unlike Reed family cemeteries #852 and #857, the stones in this cemetery are all the round-topped shape associated with Quaker burials in the south part of town. Whether this reflects religious preference or stylistic choice is unclear.

Surrounded by a substantial stone wall, this Reed family cemetery is not far off Reed Road on property that once belonged to the family. Access is gained through a wooden picket gate, but the overgrowth inside is now nearly impenetrable. In the past, the cemetery suffered extensive vandalism; those pieces of stones remaining, propped up against trees, are similar in style to those in the Reed family cemetery #858. There is a deeded right-of-way to this cemetery.

Hathaway Family Cemetery

Public

Location: Dean Street, behind 26
 Number of stones: 4
 Earliest death date: 1798
 Latest death date: 1851
 Acreage: 4,516 square feet

This early family cemetery is located behind the houses in a recently developed area. It contains simple, unornamented slate stones, making it an unusual burial area for Dartmouth, and suggesting that the Hathaways were not members of the Society of Friends (Quakers).

Arthur Hathaway, who settled in the Acushnet area and peopled that area, is thought to have come to Plymouth in 1638 with a brother, John, who is listed as owning land in Taunton and Berkeley. It may be from that area that the Hathaways buried here originated. The family's influence on this part of town is evident in the name of Hathaway Road.

British Soldiers Burial Ground

Private

Location: Mishaum Point Road, behind 143

Number of stones: 1 fieldstone

Earliest death date: 1725

Latest death date: 1725

Acreeage: Unknown

Swift's History of Mishaum Point records the presence of five grave mounds here, which were said to contain the remains of British officers. Word-of-mouth history relates that during the War of 1812, a British frigate lay off Mishaum Point for some time; perhaps the graves date from that period. Swift further relates that in 1889 one grave was opened and found to contain a uniformed British officer, but she does not discuss the date of the uniform.

The mounds Swift describes were located up the hill from a stone marked 1725 whose origin is a mystery. Today that stone is found among summer homes, and the mounds are not evident.

Private

Location: North Hixville Road, behind 1216

Number of stones: 8

Earliest death date: 1866

Latest death date: 1915

Acreage: About 2,000 square feet

Danforth Hathaway, buried in the cemetery, and his family lived in the farmhouse at the front of the property, which appears little changed over the years. Cowens and Wordells lived nearby in the Hixville area. The simple rectangular marble stones within the burial area are similar to other burial markers in North Dartmouth; they do not resemble the Quaker-influenced style of the south part of town.

Joseph Howland's 1839 burial, recorded there in 1930, is now found at South Dartmouth Cemetery, confirming the recollection of former residents of the area that the burials were disinterred and relocated before the transfer of the property to Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the 1940s.

Arabia Sampson, his wife, and their son were originally buried in a family cemetery located on the family property in the woods off Ridge Road. When the property was sold to the city of Fall River, the burials and their markers were removed to Pine Grove (Island) Cemetery (#802) where they can be found today.

Bliss Family Cemetery

Private
 Location: Dartmouth Street, 567
 Number of stones: None
 Earliest death date: Unknown
 Latest death date: Unknown
 Acreage: Unknown

Henry B. Worth records in his manuscript notebooks that Miss Sarah Howland Bliss had the bodies located in this family burial ground disinterred and relocated, apparently to South Dartmouth Cemetery. The family residence, the last vestige of the Bliss family presence in the neighborhood called Bliss Corner in their honor, was removed to property off Bakerville Road in South Dartmouth to make possible the building of a large nursing home on the site.

Sol E Mar Hospital Burials

Private

Location: Spinnaker Lane area

Number of stones: None remaining

Earliest death date: Unknown

Latest death date: Unknown

Acreage: Unknown

From 1960 until 1987 the former Sol E Mar Hospital, a rehabilitation hospital for children, served as a convent for cloistered nuns of the Carmelite Order. Before the property was sold to private developers, the bodies of four nuns who were buried there were removed to the Nuns' Circle at Sacred Heart Cemetery in New Bedford.

Town Almshouse Cemetery

Public
Location:	Slocum Road, 400
Number of stones:	None remaining
Earliest death date:	Unknown
Latest death date:	Unknown
Acreage:	Unknown

In a turn-of-the-century photograph of the Dartmouth Almshouse on Slocum Road, the burial ground appears near the street in front of the building. In 1917, Town Meeting voted to remove the bodies buried in the almshouse lot and inter them in South Dartmouth Cemetery (#806), where they rest today near the maintenance shed. For some time thereafter, records show that South Dartmouth Cemetery accepted burials for the town of Dartmouth.

Smith-Burdick Cemetery

Public:
Private:
Location:	Potomska
Number of stones:	Unknown
Earliest death date:	Unknown
Latest death date:	Unknown
Acreage:	Unknown

When the survey was made for the New England Historic Genealogical Society's 1930 publication of Vital Records of Dartmouth, Massachusetts to the year 1850, this cemetery was recorded as located at Potomska, a large geographical area. Since the burial ground has not been located, this could represent an undiscovered Smith burial ground, or merely a missing stone from the Smith family cemetery on Potomska Road (#853), which today contains only marked graves from a later era.

Slave Burial Ground

Private
Location:	Tucker Road at Allen Street
Number of stones:	Unknown
Earliest death date:	Unknown
Latest death date:	Unknown
Acreage:	Unknown

The "Slave Burial Ground" remains only a legend today. Edward Tucker wrote in 1905 that "So completely has this interesting spot reverted to its natural condition, surrounded by no barrier and used year after year as a grazing spot for cattle, that we have to scan the ground closely for the external evidence of the graves which lie beneath our feet. But here they are, one row after another . . . and tradition [is] that it was a last resting place for slaves."

Though Tucker made a plea for the preservation of this area, his pleas were ignored. The pastures he described have long since been developed into a modern residential area.

St. Aidan's Chapel Memorial Garden

Private
Location:	Smith Neck Road, 185
Number of stones:	39 plaques
Earliest death date:	1928
Latest death date:	Present
Acreage:	160 square feet

In the garden at the southwest side of the St. Aidan's Chapel property is an area set aside to receive cremated remains of members and friends of the chapel. There are no identifying markers in the garden; brass memorial plaques listing those buried are located on the south wall of the chapel. Carved slate plaques memorializing members of the Houghton family are located around the chapel.

The congregation of St. Aidan's Chapel began by holding services led by Wilson R. Stearley, bishop of Newark, at Salters Point, in the early part of the twentieth century. A permanent building for the congregation was built in 1917 in the apple orchard on the property of the Houghton family. In 1945 Arthur A. Houghton, Jr., deeded the land to St. Aidan's Chapel of Dartmouth, Inc. Two services are held each Sunday during the summer season.

Unknown Family Cemetery

Private

Location: Cross Road, 239
 Number of stones: 4
 Earliest death date: Unknown
 Latest death date: Unknown
 Acreage: Approximately 3200 square feet

Located against the back boundary wall of the property about 1500 feet from the road, this neatly walled family cemetery now holds four sets of head and foot stones, rough fieldstones upended to mark the graves. According to a member of the family which owned the property until recently, there were as many as twenty graves marked in this way years ago. There is no indication, and no knowledge among recent owners, of the identity of the deceased.

Misc 4 buried near his house at his place (Dartmouth Monthly Meeting records)

Misc 5 in the garden in the front of 771 Dartmouth Street is located a grave-stone for Anna Davis. Her burial is located in 806, but for some reason the stone remained on what was the family property.

Misc 6 The stone marking the burial of Charles Tripp is located in the yard at 801 Potomska Road. No one knows the location of the actual burial.

Misc 7 The gravestone of Isaac Bliss was found in the cellar of the home at 25 Middle Street by the current owners when they purchased the house. The location of his burial is unknown.

Misc 8 The property at 18 Howland Avenue was formerly owned by the Rex family, owners of Rex Monumental Works. The gravestones which found their way to that yard are rejects and duplicates, and do not mark actual burials.
